Houston Rep. Ellen Cohen's new bill to change the strip club per-patron tax from $5 to $3 died last week, but another bill that would charge a 10 percent tax on admissions at all sexually oriented businesses has been approved by both the House and Senate. This bill is actually supported by the adult entertainment industry, because the tax would be voluntary. Charge a cover, then you get taxed. Don't charge a cover, than no admission tax is collected. The original $5 tax bill approved last year is still tied up in court. Some clubs are paying and some aren't. I'm sure most topless clubs will gladly do away with admissions fee and just adjust drink and food prices, but I'm not sure about all nude BYOB clubs. A ten percent tax on twenty dollars entry would be two bucks. I can deal with that.

Viper of Melody
Wayne Hancock
Bloodshot Records

Years ago, Hank Williams III played a show at Trees. As he took a bow after his beautiful country set, thanked everyone for coming and encouraged all of us to continue to support "real" country music, he made special mention of Austin's Wayne "The Train" Hancock. After a short break, he returned and destroyed our eardrums with his brutal death/punk/thrash set under the guise known as Assjack.

When a direct descendant of Hank Williams tells you to lend an ear to an artist, you do it. So I did, and tell you now by proxy of HIII to do so as well. And Wayne Hancock's latest release (his seventh), Viper of Melody, is a mighty fine place to begin.

The disc was produced by Lloyd Maines at his Dripping Springs studio, The Zone. Accompanied by Izak Zaidman on electric guitar, Anthony Locke on steel guitar and Huckleberry Johnson on upright bass, Hancock takes the listener back to a simpler time. The band's juke joint, rockabilly-tinged western swing (sans horns) is as pure and simple as it gets with a timelessness that hasn't been heard on Top 40 country radio since the 1950s. And Hancock's wavering, nasal vocals are completely endearing and genuine.

Lyrically, Hancock sings about trying to beat hard times in "Jump the Blues," "Driving My Young Life Away," "Working At Working," and "Moving On #3. He covers varying stages of love on "Your Love and His Blood," "Tropical Blues" and "Dog House Blues," and includes a gorgeous version of "Midnight Stars and You" that will have you checking your calendar to make sure this is indeed the 21st century.

Of course, the release would be remiss if it didn't include at least one song about the rails, and this one has two, "High Rolling Train" and "Freight Train Boogie." In between his singing and numerous yet short solos by the gents in the band, Hancock tosses out certain phrases as accents... I can't quite explain it, but give it a listen and he'll have you smiling, too!

There isn't one bad song in the bunch, and it's a rollicking good way to get through the hard times. However, I must warn you about the title track, "Viper of Melody"-- it's one of those songs that sticks in your craw once you hear it, and damn fine advice to boot:

"When times are tough, I just twist one up and gather my friends around
Sing my heart out and play all night
tear them curtains down...
Dry your eyes and smile for me
Set your heart and spirit free and you'll feel like a king
You'll be a viper of melody."

Yeah... viper... sssssssssss.

Stuff I Couldn't Make Up If I Tried.

Not long ago I participated in one of those market research studies where you're asked to try out a product, provide feedback and in return they give you some cash. The product was some sort of science fiction looking razor with a bazallion blades and a trimmer for sculpting and hard to reach areas. I was to use the razor for a period of time making sure I'd used the trimmer at least once. There were scantron sheets that had areas to bubble in for my answers and I never spent so much time thinking about shaving as when I filled out that questionnaire. The trimmer could be used for sideburns, under the nose, back of the neck and "other regions".

Earlier in the week I had seen a shirt that said, "I shaved my balls for this?" and I thought back to it when I had finished shaving and realized that I had yet to use the trimmer.

You know where I'm going with this.

So of course I had to run around and lock the doors like I was going to molest a goat or something. And before you can say, "smooth plums" I had finished. I couldn't for the life of me see what all the fuss is about. They were the same ugly wrinkled things as before only now, they were bald. Whoopee.

What I was never warned about was just how much those bastards would itch. It started as a mild annoyance and became full on scratching events that could have lead to friction sparks had I had the time, inclination and less Gold Bond medicated powder. It was damn near crippling and I was scratching more than a frat brother returning from spring break.

In the midst of this I still had to get on with life so I made my weekend pilgrimage to my local mega mart for some random supplies. I was doing okay until I stepped up to the curb at the entrance and something shifted causing a full on, mega itch event. I was too far from the car and I had to address the issue immediately. The bathroom was not option because it was too far away and I couldn't just go to town at the entrance lest some old lady could beat me senseless with her umbrella or some other matronly weapon of mass destruction before the cops were called.

In the far corner facing the wall, beyond the second set of doors were the little motorized carts for the handicapped. No one was near them so it would be perfect for a secret scratch fest. I seated myself and scratched until I was in a stupor. When I looked up three girl scouts, their scoutmaster and a store manager surrounded me. I had visions of being hauled off to jail and a lengthy prison term given by a disbelieving judge. But on the plus side, my boys would look fabulous for the strip search.

The little blonde one said in a chipper tone, "We're here to help you shop sir."

Still startled and in a state of thankful disbelief I could only stare back blankly. The store manager smiled warmly and nodded in confirmation. "I'll help with the items that they can't reach," said their scoutmaster in an equally happy tone. What could I do? I couldn't tell them the truth-that would be disaster. I couldn't just get up and bolt-I had just scratched myself numb and probably could barely walk. So I did the only sensible thing I shrugged and let three little girls work on their merit badges by dutifully retrieving items from the well stocked shelves of my local mega mart. It was rather pleasant and the conversation was nice as we motored down the aisles discussing their future, my past and I must say they were rather polite not to ask what had crippled me.

Richard Hunter hosts his nationally syndicated talk radio show 4-6pm CST weekdays on 1360 AM Dallas.

This hypothetical has been driving me crazy all weekend: If I could have the power to do one or the other, would I prefer to travel in time forward or backward? Just when I think I've got the advantage distinguished in one way, I come up with an equally compelling reason to the contrary.

Traveling forward, I would have significant control over developments, which I would enjoy. I would be able to back time preventable tragic events in order to avoid them. In fact, the only down side that I can see is the need to avoid spoilers on future seasons of Desperate Housewives.

Moving backward, I would be able to place myself at the scene of many historical mysteries, gaining answers to many of the questions that I obsess over. I would be looking for the second shooter on the grassy knoll and witness the double homicide for which O.J. Simpson stood trial. But then there is this: Would I merely observe these infamous events, or would I risk altering the course of history by intervening in their outcomes? My inclination would be to not tamper with the time line, but it would seem that standing by idle would come with its' emotional scars.

Equally important in the backward scenario would be the need to avoid inadvertently altering any chain of events that would affect the things about my life that I like. It would seem at first not to be that difficult, but the more I think about it, the more I realize that I can't possibly know every link in a chain of events that led to a place of happiness.

My guess is that one's choice would also be dependent on one's age. If you were young enough, traveling forward in time as a means of fact checking decisions would make for a much more carefree existence. If you were older, like my 83-year-old grandmother, she would probably like to go back 10 or so years ago, prevent my grandfather's heart attack, and still have him with her.

After driving myself crazy with this all weekend, my wife suggested that the only way to really make an educated choice would be to rent the Back To The Future trilogy and heed to wisdom of Dr. Emmett Brown. She's probably right. I gotta go update my Netflix query.

I first met Midnight about three years when our bands played a show together at the Red Blood Club. I remember a lot of my friends hadn't heard them, but I had recently picked up their album from my friends record store. When I played the album I was immediately taken back to the 80's when Motorhead, Metallica (when they played speed metal), Venom and Celtic Frost ruled the metal scene with an iron fist. Midnight plays fast and sleazy like the woman we won't take home to mom. Short and fast interview with bass player Athenar by Gil Tha Thrill www.myspace.com/athenarsmidnight

How long has the band been together? The first record was released halloween 2003

How would you describe your sound? Filth, garbage, trash, sleeze etc...

Do you normally have girls dancing on stage with you when you play? We used to, now they stay chained up at home.

Why do sex and metal go together so well? Metal is very sensual.

Who's your favorite porn star? I don't really know any, I just make my own.

Are you excited about playing Dallas again? The ladies can see by the rise in my levis that I'm excited.

See Midnight live at Club Dada this Friday, May 22 with Outlaw Order (NOLA), The Roller (Austin) and locals Aten. Club Dada is located at 2720 Elm St. in Deep Ellum Dallas. The drinking starts at 8pm.

What's Going On In The Muzic World?

Danger Mouse's Next Album Will Be A Blank CD-R

Danger Mouse, the amazing mashup artist, producer, and half of Gnarls Barkley, is unable to release his newest album due to legal battles with his label, so he's embracing piracy to get his music heard.

After "legal battles," Danger Mouse's new album has been shelved by his label, EMI. But fearful that his work would never be heard, Danger Mouse came up with an idea to get his music out there while at the same time showing his anger at EMI. The album, entitled Dark Night of the Soul, will be sold as a "100+ page book" of photographs inspired by the music and taken by David Lynch, and will include a blank CD-R to be filled with torrented mp3s. All copies will be clearly labelled:

'For Legal Reasons, enclosed CD-R contains no music. Use it as you will.'

Danger Mouse made his name with a mashup of The Beatles' White Album and Jay-Z's Black Album titled, of course, The Grey Album, which was only available through non-commercial means, so this is a guy who despite his success is very aware of the state of music sales. Dark Night of the Soul is already available to stream for free from NPR, so it looks like Danger Mouse is going all out with his plan to thoroughly infuriate his record label.

Blink-182 Announces Summer Tour

If it hadn't been for drummer Travis Barker's near-fatal airplane crash last year, Blink-182 might not be touring this summer.

But after a five-year hiatus, the rock trio -- Barker, Mark Hoppus and Tom DeLonge -- will embark on a nearly 50-date North American arena and amphitheater tour, beginning July 24 at the Joint in Las Vegas, and wrapping October 3 at the Borgata Events Center in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

The trek will feature support on various dates from Weezer, Fall Out Boy, Panic at the Disco, All-American Rejects, Taking Back Sunday, Asher Roth and Chester French.

Echo & The Bunnymen To Blast 'Ocean Rain' Album Into Space

Echo & The Bunnymen are set to launch a copy of their 1984 album Ocean Rain into space.

NASA astronaut Timothy Kopra is set to take a copy of the classic album, his favorite record, with him when he blasts off to the International Space Station on June 13.

The mission ties in with a boxed-set reissue of the album, set for release on May 30. The set will include a live version of the album recorded in the Liverpool Arena last November, plus a DVD documentary and booklet.

The first 1,000 copies ordered will be signed by frontman Ian McCulloch and guitarist Will Sergeant.

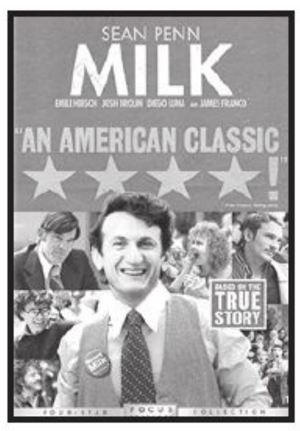
See the band's official website, Bunnymen.com, for more information.

Echo & The Bunnymen will release a new studio album, The Fountain, in September.

"JUST MOVIES"

with Jayson Decay

Alright well I'm back again after a week gone due to issues with my computer and a lot has happened since my last column. It appears that I have been asked to do yet another short, actually two but I don't know the name of the other quite yet. The first short I was offered a small part in is called Jack's Bad Day and it will be filmed and edited just in time for the Texas Blood Bath Film Festival being held in Bellmead from November 13th to 15th. Apparently I'll be acting in two shorts and I'll be working with a friend of the magazine in doing a short to submit as well, so wish us luck. Aside from that I start acting in the movie Kodie here in a couple weeks and I have to admit I'm really excited and ready to rock! Don't worry I'll be giving you all details as we progress with the filming of the movie. Anyways go to www.texasbloodbath.com for details on the festival in November, you can bet I'll be there too.



So this year I've got two movies, a new drama and a not so new comedy. The drama is the movie MILK, a true story starring Sean Penn, who really has impressed me in his last hand full of movies. Since Fast Times at Ridgemont High I can't get past Sean being the stoner guy that was more background than a star but in his older years he has blew my mind with his roles in movies like U-Turn, Mystic River, 21 Grams and I Am Sam. In MILK Penn plays Harvey Milk, a gay rights activist that became an elected official in California in the 70's, a time when gays were attacked by the police and treated really badly. The story is of Harvey's life on his 40th birthday until his death in 1978, the year I was born. It follows his rise to power and his fall when he was murdered by his fellow supervisor Dan White who sadly shot Milk and the mayor at the time, George Moscone. This movie really gives people a better understanding about how gay people were treated in San Francisco in the 70's and makes me personally glad that things are different now. This movie is definitely worth watching no matter what your views are. Give it a watch.

Next this week I'm bringing out a movie that you might not believe I enjoyed. I'm referring to the cheesy yet funny Blades of Glory starring John Heder and Will Ferrell. It's about two professional ice skaters that hate each other so much they get in a fist fight on live TV, which pisses off the National Skating Federation enough to ban them from Men's Figure Skating. After years being out of professional skating they find a loophole in the system that can get them back in skating, that being pairs skating. Typically done with a woman and a man the two desperate has-beens team up as the most unlikely skating pair to try and go for the gold. There's only one thing in the way, their complete hate for each other. Their only way to get back into the swing of things is to get along, but at what cost? This movie is hilarious. With cameos from such great actors like Craig T. Nelson and one of my favorite comedians, Nick Swardson, this movie is surprisingly funny. The things Farrell says cracks me up and the chemistry the two actors have in the movie is reminiscent of the pair of Jackie Chan and Owen Wilson in Shanghai Noon and Shanghai Knights. Check it out.

Alright everyone, until another time, see you at the movies!

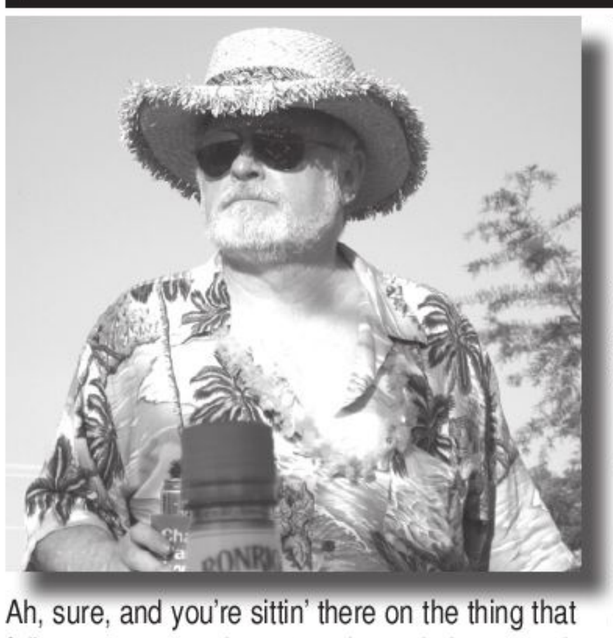
New Movies Opening Up This Week

Terminator Salvation - Christian Bale stars as John Connor, leader of the human resistance against the machines, in the return of the hit sci-fi action franchise.
Dance Flick - The Wayans family returns with their raunchy brand of spoof comedy, setting out to parody movies like 'Step Up' and 'Save the Last Dance.'
Night at the Museum: Battle of the Smithsonian - Ben Stiller returns as the bewildered night watchman who witnesses exhibits coming alive.

Opening in Selected Theaters

The Girlfriend Experience - In the latest from director Steven Soderbergh, a high-end Manhattan call girl offers clients sex, companionship and conversation.
Easy Virtue - Jessica Biel is a sassy American woman who finds herself engaging in a battle of wits with her manipulative English mother-in-law.
Burma VJ - When Burma banned foreign TV crews in 2007, a video journalist documented a massive Buddhist monk uprising for the world to see.

METRO ANE SPORTS



Ah, sure, and you're sittin' there on the thing that follows you around most and wondering, "can it get any crazier than it already is"?

BARKIN' OUT LOUD

by Pat "Two Dogs" Snow

Why, you be knowin' the answer to that already, of course it can. Both on the field of play and off. Let's fire a barking salvo across the skeptics bow and stir up things.

I've been besieged by readers from all corners of the spectrum about our darlin' Mav's.

Folks want me to pile on and blister 'em, others want me to gloat for calling it, still others called me a fair weather fan (that's amongst the lighter suggestions of me, my name, my ancestry, any girl ever dumb enough to date me, blah blah blah) and should apologize, still others have suggested that I behave like an ostrich with his head in the ground (that's the polite and printable version).

There's plenty of you out there, especially in the Mav's organization, that disagree with Two Dogs that the trade for Kidd wasn't a good 'un. You know how much cred that has with me? Well, the shipbuilder for the Titanic STILL claims they built a seaworthy vessel. Both sank, and both organizations will deny forever what they did was wrong.

What gets me barking out loud is, ok, you made a trade that didn't work, what's the beef about owning up to it, then stepping back and objectively look at what has to be done to either improve it or rebuild it?

C'mon now, they mortgaged the future in that trade, and what results did they get? A first round exit last year and a dubious second round exit this season. As you'll fondly recall, I know I do, we were told by gleeful management that this trade was a solid and that if it didn't have immediate results, then this season it would. Definitely.

Forget the regular season, I already have, and look at these playoffs. Why did they best San Antonio? Pure and simple, the Spurs were missing Ginobili which affected their defense and court tempo.

What happened in the back of the pants whippin' they received from Denver? In game 4 when they maxed all their cylinders to peak rev, they barely got 'er done, by only 2 points. Believe me when I assure you they wouldn't have won that game if the Birdman wasn't absent from the game.

What's at least some of the lessons to walk away from this with? The Mav's have continually needed a smart, skilled, powerful big man in the center just like the Rangers have always needed pitching. And just like the Rangers have perpetually ignored building a quality pitching rotation and bullpen, the Mav's have ignored the center.

In basketball you need to control the offensive boards and force the outside shot by making the inside game painful to attack. And for those of you who're gonna holler that the center doesn't control the game, I'll differ all day and night with you.

The strong center is how everything else gets to work. Think about it. But also think of the psych game to the opponent. If it's painful to charge the basket they start taking more perimeter shots, which are lower percentage, and if they're getting pounded while on defense they'll start giving way. Look at how the Mav's were backing away from the Nuggets when they attacked the front. Get Dirk a power center, and find a younger Kidd to run the speed ball.

Well, I already mentioned 'em so let's confab about those pesky Rangers. Remember we're talkin' how crazy things are right now, and our guys are adding to the mix. And before you start throwin' dog biscuits at my head, just think about it a sec. I've said all along that I thought they were improved, but still had a ways to go, like with defense, starting rotation, and definitely the bullpen. All along I've admired coach Washington's work and he's for sure doin' the job.

But, and don't kick at me, I've also said that this isn't gonna be their year to go far. That IF they make the post season, it'll be a first round kick down.

The defensive play has visibly improved, which frankly speaking, it's always been so poor that any improvement would've been visible. Ian Kinsler at 2B and Elvis Andrus at SS are the central pieces, and with Michael Young at 3B and Chris Davis at 1B, we've been seeing top grade infielding.

Last year Kinsler was almost a machine at producing errors, but it looks like he's matured to the pro game. It's not just confidence, it's his playing skill has improved. Washington has stressed fundamentals and this has been working for all of them. By the way, this is Andrus's first shot at playing in the bigs, so we'll have to wait and see how he overcomes adversity, which will come, if for no other reason than the season's so long in baseball.

Right now the Rangers are sitting atop the American League West, 4.5 games above the Los Angeles Angels, whom they just swept this past weekend. We're roughly a fifth of the way through the season, it's a long hot summer, let's take a deep breath, enjoy this while it lasts, and then see how they handle the duration.

By the way, this past weekend, Sunday's game, man alive, folks, it don't get no better'n that. A mild temp afternoon, cool breezes, an almost capacity stadium, and two teams playing very well squaring off. It was scoreless until the bottom of the seventh, Texas bags one run, pulls in two more in the eighth, and shuts LA out. You add some hot dogs, nachos, peanuts, and cold brew, that's the way to spend a weekend in Texas. Go get ya self some.

And in the already weird gets weirder department: ESPN's Monday Night Football has replaced announcer Tony Kornheiser with ex Tampa Bay Buccaneers Coach Jon Gruden.

Lemme see, here. That's gonna add Gruden to the, cough cough, already almost professional lineup of Mike Tirico and Ron Jaworski. After Gruden got booted in the wild card round of last season's playoffs, then got booted off the team, he ended up doing some studio work for ESPN.

As I watched Gruden spout some emphatically stated but totally wrong opinions on the remaining teams in the playoffs, I was suddenly clobbered with an epiphany: this guy's so bad he could end up announcing. Geez, what a ominous brain hiccup that was.

Somewhere along the line, ESPN simply HAS to learn that just because somebody has a big mouth and an enormous ego doesn't translate to understanding what's going on, being able to articulate what's going on, and have any real idea what fans are about.

Gruden's only about being right, whether he is or isn't doesn't matter to him. Jaworski is all about trying to figure out what the hell's happening on the field, and then in excruciatingly erratic explanation, lead everybody astray from the action while believing he's made a point.

Tirico is merely a buttercup that's barely a bastion of a buffer between buffoons.

How about a weird that's insulting and an embarrassment?

METRO ANE SPORTS

For this year's PGA do you know how many top 10 ranked players are scheduled to play in the Byron Nelson? Two. Yep, you read that right, two.

One of the greatest players in PGA history, hell, the world of golf's history, and the PGA and Nelson organizers can't work out a schedule that would allow the top ranked golfers to play here?

Does the name not carry any weight? Is the course layout too simple? The weather? Sponsors?

Let's see, the PGA has hyped its Open's and the Masters to such an extent it's downplayed the Nelson. The course layout isn't the longest, but it sure is still hard considering how high most of the scores are each year. Yeah, each May in this part of Texas we get rain and storms, so move the date into June, the golfers can survive. I think raising millions of dollars shows the sponsors are behind the event.

The PGA deliberately allowed the move of two games, the Quail Hollow and the Players Championship from mid-March over to May. They knew when they approved it that it would significantly detract from the Nelson. The current PGA leadership has an arrogance and disregard that's so great it causes them no pain to suffer insult to their own history and take down a legend at the same time.

Nelson devoted his life and career to the game and the PGA, he was a national and world ambassador for golf and the PGA, and many of his teaching contributions are still used today since they haven't been able to be improved upon. The PGA needs to better respect the gentlemen who got them to where they are today, men who set the standard for gold play.

Rachel Alexandra won the Preakness by the same length that the other gentlemanly studs let her leave the gate first by.

That's like a guy entering the lobby, see's a lady approaching and holds the door for her. She thanks him and immediately gets into the line in front of him. Strange, but I've never seen a lady whose accepted the door offer enter first then allow the man to be ahead of her in line. Guess all fillies are the same regardless the number of legs.

The NFL told Cincinnati Bengals wide receiver Chad Johnson last year that even though he'd legally changed his name from CJ to Ocho Cinco, he couldn't have that on his jersey for the 09 season because of marketing agreements. Now, for the 2010 season, he gets to have his name on the back, but not like he wanted.

Players get their last name on the back of the jersey. Chad changed his name from Chad to Ocho and from Johnson to Cinco, so they were only going to put Cinco on the back. Now, Johnson's jersey number is 85 (thus the name change), so with some brilliant deducing he comes up with Ocho Cinco, which, of course is NOT 85 but its 8 and 5. The NFL was only going to put Cinco on the back which wudda been 5.

Now it's gonna be Ochocinco, all one word, which is still not 85 and is incorrect for 8 and 5.

The end result? He's legally changed his name to two Mexican numbers, in Mexican, that he cannot put on his jersey and the name he has to put on his jersey is meaningless and nonsense. Much like Chad, I mean Ocho's, antics and career.

In the weird or self preservation section, whadda ya think of Mav's owner Mark Cuban skipping his teams Game 5 in Denver to accept an award in Vegas?

Suggestions I've been getting is that he feels guilty over being guilty of a lack of courtesy during game 4. It's one thing to run onto the court and yap at ref's or opposing players for how they've treated your little darlin's, and even to jaw at some heckling fans, but to tell another player's Mom that her son's a punk?

Geez, I mean, I never graduated from any charm schools but as far as I understand the guy's code of conduct, you don't talk put down trash to somebody's mom. You think your Mom might take offense if someone said that to her about you?

The idea here, Mr. C, is to keep your cool in hot situations.

Reader Response:

Mr. Dog:
How long has it been since you've been bowling? Last time I endangered any pins was over 25 years ago, but back in those dark ages, to bowl a 300 game took 12 straight strikes. Have they changed the scoring?
Vaughan
Raleigh

Vaughan:
Good catch. Yes, I said, incorrectly, that ten frames of strikes for a perfect game. It's ten frames but a strike requires two more throws, so it's ten frames and 12 strikes.
TD

Two Dogs:
I've always wondered why athletes spit during games. Is it because of elevated body temperatures or the body just producing more saliva when exerting? Or do guys just like spitting and this gives them an excuse?
Silvia
Dallas

Silvia:
Do you see any NBA players spitting on the court or down in front of their chairs during games? Nope. It's just a guy thing. By the way, we get very creative with it, like being able to use our spit to blow bubbles. When we're older and more mature, we'll sneak out into the garage where you can't see us…
TD

Two Dogs:
I just started watching basketball during these playoffs and I'm a little confused about something. I heard an announcer say this one foul was a "nonfoul". How can you have a nonfoul?
Rick
Mesquite

Rick:
Good question. The fouls are actually "violations", and you can have two types, the kind of player against player, or the kind against a rule. A nonfoul is against a rule, such as goaltending (player interferes with ball in its downward path to basket), kicking the ball, or illegal defense such as the zone defense where a player defends an area and not another player. A couple others are: traveling (taking more than two steps without dribbling, that's the ball not beer), and three second violation (no part of an offensive player can remain in the free throw lane unless the ball is being shot).
TD

Two Dogs:
When Jones traded for QB Kitna from the Detroit Lions was he giving Romo notice that he needed to start producing or there's another starter right behind him who can? And is McGee the QB in training to take over for Romo in the next year or two?
Kal
Bedford

Kal:
Kitna's a good guy, a semi respectable quarterback, but he's not here to give Romo notice or to take over, only a reliever in case of injury. Clubs like to be in the position where they can have a number 1 and 2 QB for play, and slowly develop the 3, which is what happened for Romo. I still think that Harrell or Daniels would've been a better fit.
TD

Two Dogs:
Will our special teams play now suffer after that bad accident to the new ST Coach, DeCamillis? Considering that the draft was all about providing players for the special teams, isn't this going to ruin us? Who's going to train them if the new guy's out?
Larry
DeSoto

Larry:
DeCamillis will couch coach and head coach Phillips son, Wes, will run the ST while consulting daily with DeCamillis. Wes may not have quite the fire of DC, but it'll improve throughout the season, barring injuries.

Racing Car That Runs On Chocolate Unveiled By British Researchers

A racing car that is powered by chocolate, guided by a carrot steering wheel and has bodywork made from potatoes, was unveiled in Britain today.

The WorldFirst Formula 3 car, which was developed by researchers at Warwick University, can still reach an incredible 125mph around corners.

Following the recent turmoil in Formula 1 arising from the high costs of running competitive motor racing teams, the University of Warwick team decided to build a competitive racing car using environmentally sustainable components.

They hope their F3 car will show the industry how much is possible using sustainable technologies. Project Manager, James Meredith, said: 'It's been very exciting working on the project and important for our team to develop a working example of a truly 'Green' motor racing car.

'The WorldFirst project expels the myth that performance needs to be compromised when developing the sustainable motor vehicles of the future.'

The car meets all the Formula 3 racing standards except for its biodiesel engine which is configured to run on fuel derived from waste chocolate and vegetable oil. Formula 3 cars currently cannot use biodiesel.

Dr Kerry Kirwan from the research team said plants formed the mainstay of the car's make up.

'This includes a race specification steering wheel derived from carrots and other root vegetables, a flax fibre and soybean oil foam racing seat, plant oil based lubricants and a biodiesel engine configured to run on fuel derived from waste chocolate and vegetable oil,' he said.

Federal Government Offer Tax Credit for Scooter Purchases

Sales of motorcycles and scooters shifted into high gear last year when gas prices soared. Then recession-wary consumers hit the brakes. Now, the makers and sellers of two-wheeled, fuel-efficient bikes are relying on tax breaks offered in the federal stimulus package and other incentives to get sales moving again, while easing gas consumption.

The same provision that lets taxpayers deduct sales and excise taxes from end-of-year income taxes on the purchase of a new car or truck also applies to a motorcycle or a scooter. They also can get a 10 percent federal tax credit if they buy plug-in bikes.

Manufacturers and dealers say it's too early to tell whether the incentives are making a difference in sales. One analyst says the tax breaks, especially for nonelectric models, aren't enough for many.

"It's a bit of a break, but it may not be enough if you lost your job or if there's a lot of pressure on your paycheck," said Robin Diedrich, consumer analyst for Edward Jones. "You don't buy a motorcycle because of $300 in tax savings."

New scooters range from $1,000 to $10,000; motorcycles, from $3,000 to $10,000-plus.

Scooter sales reached their annual peak last year at roughly 222,000, largely due to soaring gas prices, said Ty van Hooydonk, spokesman for the Motorcycle Industry Council. Since then, gas prices have dropped to just over half of the peak national average of $4 a gallon.

In the first quarter of this year, motorcycle sales fell 30.5 percent while scooter sales plunged 36.7 percent, compared with the same period last year, according to the Motorcycle Industry Council. Still, shops and manufacturers are promoting the savings from the stimulus package and other incentives.

"I am in the process of getting some posters here and including the information in my next newspaper ads," said Cliff Warning, owner of Scooter King Motorsports on State Street in Bunnell. "I want to tell people about the advantages that they can write off the sales taxes on their adjusted gross income."

Walmart Testing Automated Used VideogameTrade In Machines

Wal-Mart is testing a used games trade-in machine at certain locations, a development that's welcome, if only to raise the price of trade-ins (or lower the price of used games) at Gamestop. Unfortunately, according to Neocrisis, the blog-slash-anime-suffix, the vending machines don't always know what game discs you're inserting to be scanned—and when they do, they don't provide instant credit, but instead a charge to your credit card in two or three days.

Button Spy Camera

Crapvendor Brando's spy products tend to be the most compelling, even if they're surely built with the same attention to detail (none) as the gear they craft for the budget cloak-and-dagger set. Nevermind that the $96 "Button Spy Camera" appears to be a black button when slipped through the open buttonhole of your shirt, regardless of the color of all the other buttons on your shirt—pay more attention to the control mechanism, a golden ring which, when waved near the button it a series of undisclosed patterns, will cause it to record or snap a photograph.

Do You Trust Elevators? Maybe You Shouldn't

In 2003, surgical resident Hitoshi Nikaidoh was stepping into an elevator when the doors closed shut suddenly, pinning him by the shoulders. This didn't seem too bad until the elevator began moving upwards.

Nokaidoh, on his way to do his rounds at Christus St. Joseph Hospital in Houston, Texas, struggled in vain to free himself as the elevator moved upwards. Stuck between the vice-like doors of the elevator, he was decapitated when the elevator moved to the floor above.

This was the end of Hitoshi's troubles, but just the beginning for the woman who was already in the elevator when it stopped at the second floor. She helplessly witnessed the entire thing and was trapped for 20 minutes with the head before she could be rescued. She had to undergo psychological counseling for months after the incident.

20 minutes. Think about that. Makes walking up a flight of stairs not seem so bad, doesn't it? This is just more proof that machines have been attacking us for quite some time now. Be sure to watch John Conner do his best to exterminate those eveils robots in Terminator: Salvation.

Get Your Own Giant Inflatable Iceberg With Slide

Rock climbing walls are fun on land, so why not drop $5400 on getting one for the water? Sure, you have to worry less about falling and breaking your neck in the water, but aren't there enough fun things to do while swimming? To paraphrase a young jedi in training "I could almost buy my own boat for that!" I do see two rather fun uses for this. One involves scaring the hell out of people boating in the middle of the night. The other would be sneaking over to someone's house and inflating this sucker in someone's pool. www.overstock.com

Logitech Unveils An Updated Version Of Their PS3 Guitar Hero Wireless Controller

Today Logitech announced an updated version of their Wireless Guitar Controller Premiere Edition for the PS3. In addition to the new glossy black finish, the guitar incorporates some minor improvements in the build and design based on feedback from Guitar Hero players over the past few months. But fans of the original version need not worry, the new model still has the heft and high-end features of the original like real metal frets and a touch sensitive neck slider and star power buttons to justify the $200 price tag. Look for it to be available sometime in May in the US, and in Europe beginning in June.

FEELING DIRTY

All About Porn: Releases, News and Stars!

Twitter 'Porn Name Game' Could Be Scam

Played the "Porn Name Game" going around Twitter? Your personal information may be at risk. The social networking message site has warned users they would become victims of identity fraud if they join in what appeared to be the latest Twitter top trend -- finding out your porn name.

According to PCWorld and other tech sites, the Porn Name Game could be a threat. That's because the game exploits a security hole by asking users to post the name of the first pet and the first street they lived on or their mother's maiden name, then the answers are combined to arrive at a porn name. But those questions, which you might recognize, are typical security question options for many online accounts. So, if users are honest, they could well be putting themselves at risk.

Security experts note it might be innocent and just part of the way the game arrives at porn star names, or it might not. So play if you must, compelled to have friends tweeting about your new name in porn. But don't give out the real information; it's just not worth it. And any online game that asks for specific personal information and life details should be treated with suspicion, even if it looks like fun.

For those who have played and revealed answers that match online security questions of banking or credit cards accounts and such, the experts urge you to delete the post, change passwords and update those security questions right away.

Egyptian Court Bans Porn Sites

Pyramids yes, porn no. An Egyptian court banned porn websites Tuesday, calling them "venomous and vile." According to the country's state-owned MENA news agency, the Administrative Court in Cairo issued the ruling in a case filed by Islamic lawyer Nizar Ghorab, who argued sites with adult content undermined and destroyed Egyptian social values.

In its ruling, the court, which oversees government-related cases, said, "Letting these Web sites (operate) ruins moral values," reports the BBC. "Freedoms of expression and public rights should be restricted by maintaining the fundamentals of religion, morality and patriotism."

Additionally, the court warned government Web agencies that Internet providers ignoring the ruling and allowing access to the sites would be "unconstitutional" and in violation of law. The Ministry of Communications, which regulates Internet providers in Egypt, has not yet responded to the decision.

UK Lawmakers Charge Public For Porn Flicks, Horse Manure

Political leaders have been writing checks, making apologies, calling for inquiries and even threatening action against their own lieutenants in an effort to survive the publication of their expense claims in Britain's Daily Telegraph newspaper over the past few days.

The paper has stoked outrage in recession-hit Britain by revealing how lawmakers have asked to be reimbursed for everything from porn movies to chandeliers to housekeepers. One legislator even charged the public for sacks of horse manure, while an ex-minister submitted a claim for cleaning the moat that circles his country home.

Man Finds Wife And Friend On Porn DVD And Stabs Him

A Taiwanese man faces a possible jail sentence for stabbing a friend after he bought a porn DVD which he discovered showed his wife having sex with the man.

The man, identified only by his surname Lee, watched the film in 2002.

The DVD, Affairs With Others' Wives, allegedly showed his wife and friend being secretly recorded as they had sex in a motel room, news agency DPA reported.

Lee, a carpenter from Taoyuan County near Taipei, divorced his wife and the friend fled the village. However, in August last year Lee later saw his former friend and, after leaving to find a knife, returned to stab him in the thigh.

The man, a butcher, then sued Lee for causing bodily harm while Lee unsuccessfully countersued for adultery. Unable to settle their differences out of court, Lee was charged on Tuesday for causing bodily harm and faces six months in prison or a fine.

Miss California Offered Million Dollar Porn Role

Miss California (for now) Carrie Prejean doesn't believe in same-sex marriage -- but what about sex before marriage ... on camera?

In the wake of Carrie's topless photo controversy, Vivid Entertainment -- one of the biggest adult film companies in the world -- has decided to test Prejean's moral toughness with a $1 million offer to star in one of their "films."

In the formal offer, mailed off to Prejean late Wednesday afternoon, Vivid makes it clear, "This is purely a business offer and has nothing to do with your religion or your personal beliefs."

It's doubtful Prejean would accept, but a quick survey of biblically correct heterosexual males shows they would support her overwhelmingly if she did.

White Chicks Love Chocolate
Adam & Eve

These interracial release always make me feel bad. How are you suppose to reviews these without sounding like a racist. Obviously these are marketed to a certain fan base. I'll definitely look into adding another reviewer from a segment of our readers that I think I've been skipping.

Any ways, the title says it. White chicks having sex with black dudes and you get fours hours of it. Eleven scenes of young, hot white girls be seduced by dark meat. A few of my favorites were Hillary Scott and Mia Rose. They definitely had my attention or had me at attention.

Hopefully Adam and Eve green light my idea, White Rockers Do Ghetto Girls. That would be awesome, cause for some reason I've always been attracted to rap/gangster type girls. See, I'm being serious and that sounded bad. Oh well. There were hot naked girls, it made me horny, and I got off. Will I watch it again. Probably not. 2 out 5 stars. -Gil Tha Thrill

The Fantastic 4 Volume 2
Adam & Eve

Luckily for me a few of Metro's writers won't touch barely legal type porn, but I have no shame. I'll do it! Ha ha I like them young, cougars or MILF.

With Volume 2 of The Fantastic Four series we get four DVD's dedicated to school girl porn: Bree's College Daze, Badass School Girls, Sweet Candy Girls and Brat School.

Bree's College Daze was ok. If you're a fan of Bree Olson's all American next door neighbor look than you're like most of the ladies on here. The lesbian scene was awesome especially during the foot loving scene. A nice amount of anal. The last scene is pretty hardcore. Definitely the winner on this one. 3/5

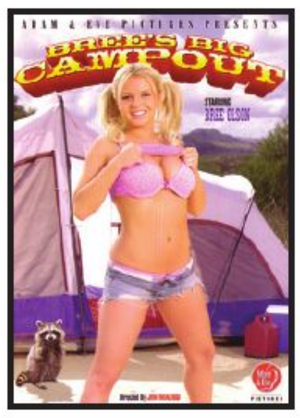
Badass School Girls was a disappointment considering all the hot ladies in it. There was some hot sex in it, but I hated the filming. Too many POV types scenes and the images was kind of grainy, like a home video. 2/5

Like always Sweet Candy Girls never disappoints. Always lots of new hotties that make you go back for repeated viewing, especially since I just scanned through. 4/5

I have to say Brat School was my favorite of the four. Lot of very beautiful ladies, three out of four were brunettes. I especially like the sinfully red school girl outfits. The lesbian threesome was probably my favorite, but just barely. 4/5

Are you on a budget and want you're money's worth, than this is a great deal. These 4 disc combine to have over 9 hours of hot barely legal school girls sex for around $30. -Gil Tha Thrill

Bree's Big Camp Out
Adam & Eve



Bree Olson, Annette Allen, Alexis Breeze, Faye Reagan, Jenny Hendrix
Director:Jim Malibu

This is about as basic as it gets 6 scenes with the premise of a sex romp outdoors. The first scene has Bree Olson and a guy hitting it before they meet up with everybody else at the campsite. An interminable oral scene followed by some rear entry and a splooge on the torso. Bree is the only thing that prevented us from hitting the eject button.

Anette Allen and her partner then do some more basic one on one that will have you skipping ahead to the girl/girl scene that follows.

Alexis Breeze and Faye Reagan are in a clutch because they hear strange noises outside the tent which leads to a simple but reasonably hot scene despite it's almost cable content.

Jenny Hendrix then gives a guy head in a pool followed by some obligatory this and that. Jenny is beautiful and talented but the scene is strictly paint by numbers.

Back at camp Bree then gets it on with two guys, finishing up with one at each end. She works it hard but she's worked harder in other films.

There's a bonus lesbo scene that's okay featuring Bree and Kayden Kross. Big empty set with two beds. Kinda hot but We' have liked to see her with Faye Reagan the stunningly beautiful redhead from the earlier g/g scene. All in all it was rather disappointing but if you're a fan of Bree or Faye's then pick it up. Otherwise, wait for the bargain bin. -Blackie Lizt

Jack's My First Porn 3
Digital Playground

The kinky gonzo from director Robby D. includes intense boy / girl scenes, hot anal, and erotic solo masturbation. "Jack's My First Porn 3" stars Teagan Presley and Katja Kassin, horny girls who will do anything to ensure Jack's first porn movie is a hit.

The "My First Porn" series is a comical sex-spectacle of Jack directing his first porn movie. Volume 3 features superstar Teagan Presley in a marathon f*ck fest with Scott Nails. The A-list cast includes horny girls, like Austin Kincaid, Katja Kassin, Bobbi Dean, Candy Lee and Faith. With Teagan, juicy boy/girl romps, and tons of tease, titties, and anal, "Jack's My First Porn 3" has it all. Enjoy some first-class Digital Playground humor interlaced between all the delicious stars, all of which makes "Jack's My First Porn 3" insanely satisfying and extremely entertaining.

Saudi Beauty Pageant Aims To Find A Very Different Model

Beauty may well be in the eye of the beholder but in a country where a woman's eyes are the only feature on public display, judging a beauty pageant could prove awkward.

For that reason the future Miss Saudi Arabia will not win on the merits of her figure in a bikini or her perfect skin, but will instead secure the coveted crown by dint of her devotion to her parents and Islamic values.

As of tomorrow 200 veiled hopefuls will start a ten-week process to find the winner of "Miss Beautiful Morals", including a workshop entitled "Mum, paradise is at your feet", a reference to the Prophet Muhammad's dictum that respect for one's parents is a foundation of the faith. "The idea of the pageant is to measure the contestants' commitment to Islamic morals . . . It's an alternative to the calls for decadence in the other beauty contests that only take into account a woman's body and looks," Khadra al-Mubarak, the event's founder, said.

Unlike other competitions abroad, there will be no men involved at any stage in Saudi Arabia's only contest for young women and it will not be televised, allowing the competitors to take off the veils and black abayas that cover Saudi women from head to toe. "The winner won't necessarily be pretty," Ms al-Mubarak said. "We care about the beauty of the soul and the morals."

Saudi women are required by law to cover themselves up in public, not to drive or go about in public places unaccompanied by a male relative. Any woman disobeying the strict rules risks the often violent wrath of the mutaween, the morality police who in 2002 prevented firemen from entering a burning girls' school in Mecca because the girls were not wearing veils, resulting in the deaths of 14 students. The vigilantes, officially known as the Committee for the Promotion of Virtue and Prevention of Vice, have also in the past cracked down on florists selling red roses on Valentine's Day and forbidden the walking of pets in public, fearful that young men might be using cute dogs to engage women in conversation.

The competition is now in its second year, with the number of women aged 15 to 25 hoping to bag the $2,600 prize almost tripling from last year.

While hardly racy stuff, the girls' contest is a marked improvement on the only other previous pageants allowed in the kingdom, which were for goats, sheep and camels, and aimed at encouraging livestock breeding.

SEX IN THE NEWZ

Priest Writes Sex Guide

A Polish priest has published a sex manual advising couples to have a 'saucy and fantasy packed' love life. Father Ksawery Knotz's book, entitled In Sex as you don't know it: For married couples who love God, has been described as a "Catholic Kama Sutra".

The Franciscan friar has raised eyebrows by going into graphic detail about how married couples can spice up their sex lives.

"Every act - a type of caress, a sexual position - with the goal of arousal is permitted and pleases God," he writes. "During sexual intercourse, couples can show their love in every way, can offer one another the most sought after caresses."

Sex in marriage, Father Knotz explains, should not be boring but "saucy, surprising and fantasy packed".

Available through one of Poland's biggest retail chains, the book, which has the backing of the Catholic Church in Poland, has become something of hit, with the publishers already contemplating a reprint.

Some Poles have questioned the competency of a celibate monk who lives in monastery to write about sex. But Father Knotz says his experience comes from listening to married couples talk about sex, and he has run a website giving sexual advice in both Polish and English for almost a year.

Survey Finds 'Friends with Benefits' Common

Can two people have sex and still remain "just friends?" A recent study found that 60 percent of college students have been in a "friends with benefits" relationship, but that the possibility for romantic feelings — and a lack of communication — can complicate such an arrangement.

That may seem fairly obvious. But the study, published in the journal Archives of Sexual Behavior, focused on why college students have these relationships at all. Researchers from Wayne State University and Michigan State University asked 125 undergraduates why they would or wouldn't have sex with a friend, and what the advantages or disadvantages would be.

Two-thirds of participants said they had been in a "friends with benefits" relationship, and 36 percent said they currently were in one. The main advantage of such a relationship was "no commitment" (reported by 59.7 percent of participants), which was followed closely by "have sex" (55.6 percent).

More than half of those who had sex with a friend said they had engaged in all forms of sex; 22.7 percent said they had intercourse only, while 8 percent said they did everything but have intercourse.

Why The Bible Isn't Such A 'Good Book'

It is known as the 'Good Book' but the Bible has enough bad behaviour to fill a whole series of The Jeremy Kyle Show.

Both testaments are littered with references to what are now called paraphilias, the literary description for sexual deviant behaviour, according to the author of a new medical book on the subject.

Forensic scientist Prof Anil Aggrawal believes he has produced the first ever full charge sheet of sexual crimes in the Bible as part of his research into paraphilia.

One example of date rape was when Abraham's nephew Lot was plied with wine by his daughters before they have sex with him, he said.

But there are also less obvious references to voyeurism, exhibitionism and necrophilia.

These are all part of what psychologists later refer to as deviant sexual behaviour, said the professor from the Maulana Azad Medical College in New Delhi, India.

'It is important to realise and appreciate that what is moral in one age and time, may at some other time, may begin to be seen as immoral and vice-versa,' Prof Aggrawal wrote in the Journal Of Forensic And Legal Medicine.

Man Tried To Hire Prostitute For His Son, 14

A man who tried to hire a prostitute to take his 14-year-old son's virginity as a present was spared jail by a court on Friday.

The Polish national took the boy out in his car and allowed him to pick out the prostitute, who was standing at the side of the road in the red-light district of Nottingham. But the 42-year-old father was arrested because the teenager had chosen an undercover police officer, Nottingham Crown Court heard.

The man, who cannot be named for legal reasons, was handed a 10-month prison sentence, suspended for a year, after he admitted a charge of trying to solicit a woman to have sex with a child, the Press Association reported.

Sexy Mascot Can Stay At Eatery If Curves Covered

A curvaceous, scantily clad mannequin can keep her spot outside a Cincinnati area barbecue joint, but local officials want her to cover up a bit.

The life-size figure stands as a busty beacon outside a restaurant in suburban Reading (REH'-ding) owned by Kenny Tessel. He told zoning officials at a hearing Wednesday night that the advertising gimmick has boosted business 40 percent.

The 5-foot-10 mannequin is on the street wearing a bikini top and tight short-shorts, though Tessel brought her to the hearing draped in a long, sleeveless gray T-shirt.

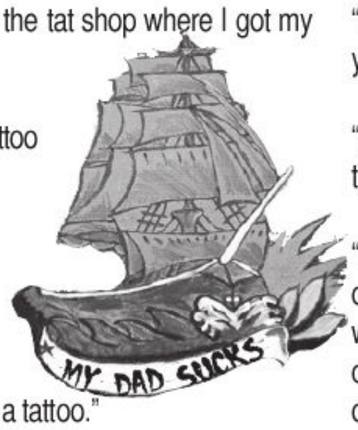
The board said Tessel may continue to use the figure only if it's dressed more modestly in front of the restaurant, too. He plans to appeal.

IT S HARD TO FIND A GOOD DONKEY SHOW

The Weekly Adventures Of OJ Tobias

So, I've been dealing with alot of paternity suits lately, and my 16 year old son decided he wants a tattoo. What loser gets tattoos? What the fk is wrong with kids these days? He wants to get a big fking battleship tattooed on his arm? How stupid is that?

So, I took him down to the tat shop where I got my dog tattooed.



"Chino, I want you to tattoo my kid."

"How old is he?"

"He has to be 18 to get a tattoo."

"What the fk? My dog was three when you tattooed Spiderman kicking Batman's ass on her!"

"Yeah, but she was 21 in dog years."

"Well, just put down that he is a 16 year old's dog."

"Oj, get real. No one is going to believe that you got a dog that is 112 dog years old. Who tats a dog that old?"

"Just do it. I am trying to do some tough love here."

"What are you trying to get?"

"I want it to say 'Tattoos are for losers' so he won't want another one. Put it on his face. And he wants some Village People shit on his arm."

"Oj, I can't do that. I have told you everybody's got to be 18. When he turns 18 you can get some matching father & son tattoos."

"Fk that! He ain't getting one then, either! He don't need no tat fking up his future. I don't bust my ass getting drunk and stealing shit for him to have a great life so he can ruin it with a shitty tattoo!"

So, Chino fked up my whole morning and my abilty to be a role model. I decided I would just take my kid with me on my job for the paper.

Since I am a big-time writer and had made a new friend at the courthouse, I decided to do some hard-hitting court reporting like the ones the jerks on TV do. So I had my son write me a good letter to send to some judges for interviews. I could not get one damn judge to fking reply.

So, I used my pen name "Gil T. Thrilla." I know it sounds kinda gay, but what to do? No need for the judges that I hang out with to know who their interview would be, plus I had some hard-hitting questions.

Well, it only took 6 months and I was in a judges chamber and she was a fking hottie. I adjusted some of my questions. Plus, I think she recognized me.

"Mr. Tobias, I don't have any docket calls today... Are you hear to confess to something?"

"Hell no, I am here to interview you. Just call my editor if you don't believe me."

"Mr. Tobias, I don't think it is wise for someone I have convicted four times to ask me for an interview." She was just so hot in the judge's dress! "Plus, I already called the paper you say you write for and they so no one there is named Bill. They also said they believe you burglarized their office and they currently have a trespassing warrant against you. I asked them why they even print the articles you write and they informed me that you do occasionally pay your bill for ad space. Colleen also asked if I could do a rush protective order, because she thinks you're insane."

This interview was going great. "So, you are saying you are aware that I am a fking geologist? Good, now let's get down to the interview. What do you got on under that cool ass robe? I am hoping something kinda skimpy, like a sling shot thong. That would be fking hot!"

"Mr. Tobias, who is this with you?" The judge was getting off track.

"Hey, I will ask the questions here..." I said sternly.

The judge looked at my kid. "Do you have the car keys, son?"

"Yes, your honor." My kid is such a kiss ass.

"You can pick your Dad up in the morning." That was great news. She was going to show me what she has on under them robes.

"Yeah, beat it. Big Poppa is going to get you a new Mommy."

Apparently, the bailiffs got me confused with the scumbags, because instead of going to her chambers to bang the hell out of her, they threw me in the drunk tank again.

Fking cock blockers.

An old lady dies and goes to heaven. She's chatting it up with St.Peter at the Pearly Gates when all of a sudden she hears the most awful bloodcurdling screams.
"Don't worry about that," says St.Peter, "it's only someone having the holes put into her shoulder blades for wings."
The old lady looks a little uncomfortable but carries on with the conversation. Ten minutes later, there are more blood curdling screams
"Oh my God," says the old lady, "now what is happening?"
"Not to worry," says St. Peter, "She's just having her head drilled to fit the halo."
"I can't do this," says the old lady, "I'm going to hell."
"You can't go there, "says St. Peter. "You'll be raped and sodomized."
"Maybe so," says the old lady, "but I've already got the holes for that !"

And other strange oddities of the world

Rotten Office Fridge Cleanup Sends 7 To Hospital

An office worker cleaning a fridge full of rotten food created a smell so noxious that it sent seven coworkers to the hospital and made many others ill.

Firefighters had to evacuate the AT&T building in downtown San Jose on Tuesday after the fumes led someone to call 911. A hazmat team was called in.

What crews found was an unplugged refrigerator crammed with moldy food.

Authorities say an enterprising office worker had decided to clean it out, placing the food in a conference room while using two cleaning chemicals to scrub down the mess.

The mixture of old lunches and disinfectant caused 28 people to need treatment for vomiting and nausea.

Authorities say the worker who cleaned the fridge didn't need treatment — she can't smell because of allergies.

Motorist: 500-Pound Moose 'Fell Out Of The Sky'

Police said a 500-pound moose fell 18 feet to its death when it apparently leaped a guardrail on an Interstate 95 overpass and landed on Hinckley Road. Officials learned of the incident when a motorist called the town office shortly after 8 a.m. Tuesday and told assistant town clerk Shirley Bailey that "a moose just fell out of the sky."

Bailey said the driver, who was under the bridge when he spotted the falling moose, was "pretty excited about it."

Police Chief Charles Runnels said the yearling bull probably panicked because of the noise and traffic along I-95 and began running. He said it just picked the wrong spot to jump the guardrail, falling onto a road instead of landing in a field. A passerby with a wrecker hauled away the carcass.

Hungry Suspect Caught In Taco Bell Parking Lot

Officials say a suspected drug dealer who led police on a 90 mph chase in Indiana was arrested after he stopped suddenly at a Taco Bell parking lot.

Fort Wayne police Sgt. Mark Walters says 36-year-old Jermaine Askia Cooper told officers he "knew he was going to jail for a while" and wanted to get one last burrito. He did not get the burrito, police said.

Toilet Snake Attack: Urban Legend Comes True?

A Taiwanese man became a sitting target for a snake, which bit his penis as sat on the toilet at his rural home, local media reported on Monday.
"As soon as he sat down, he suddenly felt a knife-like pain and reacted instinctively by standing up," the China Times said. "When he looked down, he saw the big snake."

The 51-year-old man, from Nantou County, was under medical care with minor injuries, a director at Puli Christian Hospital said.

"As soon as he has passed the risk of infection, he can go," the director, who declined to be named, said. "A snake's mouth isn't always clean."

Local television images showed the black and yellow reptile, reportedly a species of rat snake, being uncoiled and plucked slowly from the toilet bowl.

Cash Flies Out Of Convertible On German Motorway

A man lost 23,000 euros ($31,000) to the wind when an envelope with the money he had stuck in the passenger seat pocket of his convertible blew away during a test drive in northern Germany.

The cash -- in 500, 200, and 100 euro notes -- fluttered across the motorway in the midst of speeding traffic near the city of Hanover, police said.

The man, 23, contacted police immediately, who then blocked the motorway in both directions for nearly half an hour. Eight police officers assisted the man in retrieving his notes and were able to recover 20,000 euros.

"The remaining 3,000 euros have not been found," a police spokeswoman said, but warned treasure hunters of searching for any bills and keeping them, saying that was illegal.

2 Yellowstone Workers Fired After Watering Geyser

Two seasonal Yellowstone National Park concession workers have been fired after a live webcam caught them urinating into the Old Faithful geyser.

Park spokesman Al Nash says a 23-year-old man on Tuesday was fined $750 and placed on three years of unsupervised probation for urinating, being off trail in a restricted area and taking items from the area. The man also was banned from Yellowstone for two years. The second employee's case is pending.

Deputies: Banana Used As Gun In Holdup, Then Eaten

Authorities in North Carolina say a store owner and a patron thwarted a teen accused of trying to carry out a robbery by concealing a banana beneath his shirt to resemble a gun.

Winston-Salem authorities say 17-year-old John Szwalla entered the Internet cafe Thursday and demanded money, saying he had a gun.

The owner, Bobby Ray Mabe, said he and a customer jumped Szwalla, holding him until deputies arrived. While they waited, Mabe says the teen ate the banana.

Mabe says deputies took pictures of the peel. Forsyth County Sheriff's office spokesman Maj. Brad Stanley says deputies joked about charging Szwalla with destroying evidence. Szwalla faces a charge of attempted armed robbery.
